

Proven Safety of Homeopathy With Pregnant and Nursing Women

For centuries homeopathy has been safely and successfully used to treat a plethora of common conditions associated with pregnant and nursing women. Not only does homeopathy assist in treating the mother during pregnancy or nursing, but also enhances the health of the unborn or nursing child as well. I have let my pregnant and nursing patients know that we are actually treating two for the price of one!

The over 200 year-old science and practice of homeopathy has proven itself most positive for treatment during pregnancy and validated by the greatest tests of all—time and adversity. Dr. James Tyler Kent, the father of American homeopathy, said, “a pregnant woman is more sensitive to the indicated (homeopathic) remedy than at any other time.” He also added that, “the physiological functions are more active, and because great changes are occurring throughout the whole organism, the remedy has much better opportunity to do its work.”

The amazing truth is that the very best possible time to treat a woman homeopathically is during pregnancy. The new life growing within her brings out unique symptomatic communication patterns to express her specific needs for certain homeopathic remedies that can maximize her health as well as the health of her baby.

Pregnancy has become known as a time when predictions are useless and all the rules change. Interestingly though, the significant changes observed in the pregnant mother are often key indicators for the treatment of her developing infant's needs.

Homeopathy is a therapy that works gently and safely, yet is very curative and restorative in its deep-working actions. Proven to be highly effective for many of the common health conditions of pregnancy, homeopathy has provided wonderful success with the following King Bio Natural Medicines:

New Testing Procedures

The use of our Bio Response Tests (BRT) such as kinesiology, leg length, electro-acupuncture testing, etc... brings a conformation as to which homeopathic products are needed or not needed by the individual. With the highly individualized healing art of homeopathy, these tools are of great value discerning what products are needed as well as not needed. Our booklet Making Homeopathy Easy describes these procedures for the consumer to be empowered to take greater control of their health.
