

What Is Homeopathy?

Homeopathy is a scientific system of healthcare that activates the body's own healing processes in order to cure disease naturally, gently, and promptly. Homeopathy is a natural pharmaceutical science that uses very small or infinitesimal doses of substances from the plant, mineral, or animal kingdoms to activate the body's nervous system to initiate the healing response.

The word 'homeopathy' is derived from the Greek "homoios" meaning similar and "pathos" meaning suffering.

The German physician and chemist Dr. Samuel Hahnemann founded the science of homeopathy in the early 1800's. While performing research into the toxicological effects of the medicines of his time, Dr. Hahnemann discovered that a specific dilution of a substance would remove the symptoms that substance was capable of evoking. Through numerous experiments, he advanced the theory that "likes are cured by likes", and today it is a verified law of pharmacology, The Law of Similars.

For example, if one drinks too much coffee the mind races and prevents sleep; the nervous system gets on edge, and trembling may even result. A specifically prepared dilution of coffee will gently and promptly reverse these types of symptoms.

Ipecac in a large dose causes nausea and vomiting. An ill person suffering from the same or similar symptoms improves after taking a specifically prepared dilution of ipecac.

Another example is the symptoms caused by being exposed to sliced onions. The eyes may burn and water profusely, and the nose, too, may water and sneezing may occur. These symptoms produced by sliced onions are very similar to those of hay fever. As you might expect, one remedy for hay fever is the onion, specifically diluted according to exact homeopathic principles.

You will also see application of the Law of Similars in genetics, physics, chemistry, and immunology. In physics, opposite poles of a magnet attract while similar poles repel. By placing similar poles next to each other, a weakened magnet will be recharged/regenerated or restored by the Law of Similars.

A basic principle of solvent chemistry states that a substance will be a solvent to another substance when it has a similar type of molecular bond. It has to be either similarly polar or similarly apolar, and then like will dissolve like. Immunology, of course, crudely applies the Law of Similars to activate antibody responses with small doses of a similar substance that will evoke the allergic symptoms.

Homeopathic remedies focus on the whole person and the body's own natural defense systems. Homeopathy activates the body's own healing processes at both the physical and mental/emotional levels. The range of problems in which homeopathy can be effectively used is extensive and includes first aid, acute illnesses, and all manners of chronic conditions.
